Central Directory of Sikhism-Related Websites on the Internet

Introduction

This document is a master-directory in the form of a raw-listing of all Sikhism-related website directories I have encountered on the World Wide Web (i.e. the Internet) as of 2025. Many of the websites listed in those directories are now defunct and can no longer be accessed through normal means. Refer to the research conducted by the_analects on forgotten, dying, and lost Sikh websites for further reading.

The list presented here is quite unrefined. I merely copy-and-pasted the raw URL addresses of listings of Sikh-related websites on various corners of the Internet. Some websites contain a descriptor explaining its purpose or content, most do not. To access now defunct websites, you can use the Internet Archive's Wayback Machine. Many more Sikh websites will likely continue to go defunct in the coming-years due to the increasing centralization/consolidation of the Internet and online-activity on a select-few websites, such as social-media websites like Reddit, Twitter (now 'X'), YouTube, Instagram, etc. Thus, the blog-sites, bulletin-boards, forums, and other older website-types will continue to disappear due to decreased traffic and interest. As a result, many Sikh websites and their internal details are completely lost and I have only been able to record the domain URLs/web-addresses they once were hosted at.

There is a real-danger that much of the Sikh cyber/digital history and heritage will be lost due to this shift. Thus, a hundred years from now, the early Internet-period of Sikhism may be viewed as a "dark-age", with few details being preserved, considering how poorly the community conserves its history/heritage in-general, let alone its online one, which probably is not on any Sikh's radar. It is quite ironic that the shift from analog-to-digital during the late 20$^{th}$ and early 21$^{st}$ century will result in a massive loss of understanding, knowledge, material, etc. that few today even understand or comprehend. It is easier to preserve a book than keeping a website operating for decades. Websites have costs associated with them, data can be corrupted/lost, etc. Therefore, this is a humble attempt on my meagre end to remedy this frightening situation facing the Sikh community, nay the wider human community, today.

The websites listed within the directories are extremely diverse. Some host certain files, others are blogs, a few are community-orientated forums, gurdwara websites, sites dedicated to certain sects/groups, and so-on-and-so-forth. Rather than compiling a list of every single Sikh-related website (blogs, podcasts, forums, gurdwara sites, sects/organization homepages, etc.), which I initially planned, I have scaled-back my effort to merely compile a list of website directories and BBS forums I can still find on the web, due to time-constraints. Enjoy!
